United States District Court
Central District of California
Western Division

AMADOU LAMINE DIOUF,

Petitioner,

v.

ERIC H. HOLDER, JR., UNITED STATES ATTORNEY GENERAL, et al.,

Respondents.

CV 06-7452 TJH (FMOx)

Order

JS-6

Diouf petitioned for habeas corpus relief and requested a preliminary injunction, ordering an Immigration Judge to hold a bond hearing, on the grounds that his lengthy detention violated 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), and the Due Process Clause. This Court granted the petition for habeas corpus relief and the preliminary injunction. The Immigration Judge released Diouf on bond. The Government

1 appealed both decisions.

2 The Circuit reversed the grant of habeas corpus relief and vacated and 3 remanded the preliminary injunction for further proceedings consistent with its 4 opinion. The Circuit asked this Court to determine whether § 1231(a)(6) requires 5 a bond hearing, whether the Due Process Clause requires a bond hearing and 6 whether the post-custody reviews Diouf received satisfied the Due Process Clause.

7 In Diouf v. Mukasey, 542 F.3d 1222 (9th Cir. 2008), the circuit ruled that 8 Diouf was not entitled to habeas corpus relief because he was detained under § 9 1231(a)(6) and not § 1226(a). Diouf, 542 F.3d at 1233. The Circuit concluded 10 that, “an alien is entitled to habeas relief after a presumptively reasonable six-month
11 period of detention under § 1231(a)(6), only upon demonstration that the detention 12 is indefinite – i.e., that there is good reason to believe that there is no significant 13 likelihood of removal in the reasonably foreseeable future.” Diouf, 542 F.3d at 14 1233. Because Diouf was properly detained under § 1231(a)(6) at the time of his 15 petition for habeas corpus relief and the preliminary injunction, it follows that he 16 is not entitled to a bond hearing as a requirement of § 1231(a)(6).

17 Both §§ 1226(a) and 1231(a)(6) are ambiguous as to the authority of the 18 Attorney General to prolong the detention of an alien. Section 1226(a) provides the 19 Attorney General with discretionary authority to release aliens on bond “prior” to 20 the removal period. Similarly, § 1231(a)(6) provides the Attorney General with 21 discretionary authority to detain certain classes of aliens “beyond” the removal
22 period. Prieto-Romero v. Clark, 534 F.3d 1053, 1057 (9th Cir. 2008). Section 23 1226(a), read in light of the Constitutional demand, limits an aliens’s detention to 24 a period reasonably necessary to bring about the aliens’s removal from the United 25 States. Prieto-Romero, 534 F.3d at 1062-1063. Because § 1226(a) and § 26 1231(a)(6) create the same Constitutional ambiguity, it follows that § 1231(a)(6)

1 should be read in the same light as § 1226(a). Prieto-Romero, 534 F.3d at 1063.
2 Thus, aliens who are detained under § 1231(a)(6) cannot be indefinitely detained 3 without sufficient procedural due process.

4 Though § 1226(a) and § 1231(a)(6) create the same Constitutional concern,
5 it does not follow that Diouf, like an alien under § 1226(a), is entitled to a bond
6 hearing as a requirement of the due process. The statutes are similar in language,
7 however, it is the purpose of the statute that controls and not the fact that both say
8 an alien “may” be detained. The Court has held that the nature of due process 9 protection may vary depending upon the status and circumstances of the alien.
10 Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 694, 121 S. Ct. 2491, 2501, 150 L. Ed. 2d 653, 11 669 (2001). Thus, it is the status and circumstance of the alien that determine what 12 type of process is due and not simply that § 1226(a) and § 1231(a)(6) have similar 13 wording.

14 In Casas-Castrillon v. Department of Homeland Sec., 535 F.3d 942 (9th Cir.
15 2008), the court concluded that aliens are entitled to a bond hearing as a matter of 16 due process. Casas-Castrillon, 535 F.3d at 952. However, the status and 17 circumstance of the alien in Casa-Castrillon is factually different from Diouf. In 18 Casas-Castrillon the alien was a lawful permanent resident who was being detained 19 under § 1226(a) because his original removal orders were still being judicially
20 reviewed. Casas-Castrillon, 535 F.3d at 942. Furthermore, Casa-Castrillon did not 21 receive adequate procedural due process protection while he was detained. Casas-
22 Castrillon, 535 F.3d at 952. In contrast, Diouf was given a final removal order and 23 is simply asking the circuit to review his denied motion to reopen the case.
24 Moreover, Diouf was lawfully permitted but subsequently ordered removed by the 25 Board of Immigration Appeals has exhausted all of his opportunities to challenge his 26 final removal order directly and has previously been granted release on bond and

1 had the bond cancelled for failure to timely depart. Also, Diouf received adequate
2 procedural due process when he received his two post-order custody reviews. Diouf 3 is not entitled to a bond hearing as a matter of due process because he is not in the 4 same status and circumstance as Casas-Castrillon.

5 The Constitutional concern due to the ambiguity of § 1231(a)(6) does require 6 that an alien receive adequate procedural protection to ensure that the government's 7 asserted justification for physical confinement outweighs the individual's 8 constitutionally protected interest in avoiding physical restraint. Prieto-Romero, 534
9 F.3d at 1065. Because Prieto-Romero was detained under § 1226(a), he received 10 the procedure that 8 C.F.R. § 236.1(d) required. Prieto-Romero, 534 F.3d at 1065-
11 66. The court concluded that Prieto-Romero was not entitled to another bond 12 hearing because he had already received adequate procedural due process. Prieto-
13 Romero, 534 F.3d at 1068.

14 Similarly, Diouf has already received adequate procedural due process.
15 Because Diouf was detained under § 1231(a)(6), the procedure in 8 C.F.R. § 241.4
16 applied. Diouf received two post-order custody review considerations on July 29,
17 2005, and again on July 25, 2006, as required by 8 C.F.R. § 241.4. The post-order 18 custody review worksheet required the reviewing officer to consider numerous 19 factors laid out at 8 C.F.R. § 241.4(e), (f), and (h)(2). The basic purpose of the 20 immigration detention is assuring the alien's presence at removal. Prieto-Romero,
21 534 F.3d at 1063. The government's decision to continue custody is not in violation
22 of due process when balanced with other considerations, such as Diouf's criminal 23 history, lack of cooperation in past removal proceedings and the likelihood of his 24 future removal. To the extent Diouf retains any constitutional rights, the post-order 25 custody review procedures provided ample procedural due process in these 26 circumstances. An alien is not entitled to a bond hearing when he has received

1 adequate due process. Prieto-Romero, 534 F.3d at 1068. Thus, because Diouf
2 received adequate due process he is not entitled to a bond hearing.

3 It is Ordered that the petition for a preliminary injunction be, and hereby is,
4 Denied.
