No. C02-2304P

ORDER ON PETITIONERS'
MOTION FOR ATTORNEY'S FEES

Chenel, njs

This matter comes before the Court on Petitioners' Motion for Attorney's Fees and Costs under the Equal Access to Justice Act ("EAJA"), 28 U S C § 2412 (Dkt No 50) Petitioners are Somali nationals who moved this Court for an order enjoining the Immigration and Naturalization Service ("INS") from deporting them (and others similarly situated) to Somalia and a declaration that the INS did not have the statutory authority to do so This Court, by order of January 17, 2003, granted the requested relief on a class-wide basis, and on request of the parties, made the injunction permanent The Court also ordered three of the four named Petitioners released pursuant to the Supreme Court's directive in Zadvydas v Davis, 533 U S 678 (2001) The Government appealed that decision to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, and the matter is currently pending

Petitioners now bring this motion seeking an award of attorney's fees and costs as the "prevailing party" under the EAJA. The Government to date has not opposed this motion on the merits, but asserts that the motion is not yet timely because of the pending appeal The Government therefore argues that an award of fees and costs would be premature. Having carefully considered the papers and pleading submitted by the parties, the Court holds that the motion is timely Further,

1 because the Government carries the burden of establishing that its litigation position was 2 substantially justified and has chosen not to address the merits of the fee petition, the Court finds the 3 motion unopposed, and GRANTS the petition for an award of fees.

4 BACKGROUND

5 Petitioners move for an award of attorney's fees under the Equal Access to Justice Act, 28 6 U S C § 2412. In support of that motion, petitioners submit an affidavit from one of the attorneys 7 working on the case, attesting to the hours worked by the various other attorneys and nonattorneys 8 for the petitioners. The affidavit provides the total number of hours worked by each person and a 9 brief description of the issues researched work performed by each attorney. The total number of 10 hours claimed is 953 1 hours of attorney time and 107 15 hours of paralegal and assistant time. At a 11 rate of $125 per hour of attorney time, and between $47 and $125 per hour of paralegal/assistant 12 time, the total amount requested is $146,873 11

13 Respondents presently defend on only one ground that the request for fees under the EAJA is 14 premature. Respondents argue that a successful litigant has a 30-day "window" in which to file a 15 request for fees, and that that window does not begin until judgment has become final and is no 16 longer appealable. Therefore, Respondents move this Court to dismiss the EAJA motion for lack of 17 jurisdiction, or in the alternative to hold the motion in abeyance pending appeal. Respondents do not 18 make any arguments concerning its position as being "substantially justified," nor do they presently 19 dispute any of the fee claims. Respondents do, however, request that if its motion to dismiss the 20 EAJA claim and motion to hold EAJA motion in abeyance are both denied, that they be afforded 21 more time to respond to the substance of the motion, citing the need to spend time working on the 22 present appeal and "other litigation matters." No competent affidavit was submitted attesting to 23 what "other litigation matters" were so demanding of counsel's time.

24 Moving to the petitioners' motion, the precise issue that the Court must first address is to 25 define the time at which the period begins that a prevailing party may file a motion for fees and costs 26 under the EAJA. In other words, the Court must decide whether the EAJA establishes a fixed

1 window in which a prevailing party must file an application for fees, or a deadline by which the party 2 must file. Because the Court determines that a deadline is established and that the application for 3 fees is therefore timely, the Court then considers the underlying claim with respect to the substantial 4 justification issue and the affidavit submitted in support of the application, and GRANTS the 5 motion.

6 ANALYSIS

7 1 Timeliness

8 The EAJA provides for an award of attorney's fees in cases litigated against the Federal 9 Government. Specifically, the EAJA provides.

10 (d)(1)(A) Except as otherwise specifically provided by statute, a court shall award to a 11 prevailing party other than the United States fees and other expenses, in addition to 12 any costs awarded pursuant to subsection (a), incurred by that party in any civil action 13 (other than cases sounding in tort), including proceedings for judicial review of 14 agency action, brought by or against the United States in any court having jurisdiction 15 of that action, unless the court finds that the position of the United States was 16 substantially justified or that special circumstances make an award unjust

17 (B) A party seeking an award of fees and other expenses shall, within thirty days of 18 final judgment in the action, submit to the court an application for fees and other 19 expenses which shows that the party is a prevailing party and is eligible to receive an 20 award under this subsection, and the amount sought, including an itemized statement 21 from any attorney or expert witness representing or appearing in behalf of the party 22 stating the actual time expended and the rate at which fees and other expenses were 23 computed. The party shall also allege that the position of the United States was not 24 substantially justified. Whether or not the position of the United States was 25 substantially justified shall be determined on the basis of the record (including the 26 record with respect to the action or failure to act by the agency upon which the civil action is based) which is made in the civil action for which fees and other expenses are sought.

28 U.S.C. § 2412 (2002) (emphasis added) "Final judgment" is defined as "a judgment that is final and not appealable." Id. at § 2412(d)(2)(G)

At first glance, the language "within thirty days" may appear to imply that an application for fees must be made during a fixed window of time beginning when an action can no longer be appealed – 30 days after judgment is entered by a district court if that judgment is not appealed, or 90 days after judgment is entered by a circuit court if the Government does not file for a writ of certiorari. Yet courts that have examined the legislative history of the act and its 1985 amendments

1 have come to the contrary conclusion, that the EAJA establishes a deadline for filing fee requests, 2 not a fixed window during which they must be filed. This appears to be an unresolved issue in the 3 Ninth Circuit.

4 Prior to the amendments to the act, a circuit split existed as to whether the 30-day deadline 5 for filing a fee application commenced upon a final but appealable order of the district court, 6 McQuiston v Marsh, 707 F.2d 1802 (9th Cir. 1983), or not until the expiration of the time for appeal
7 or the completion of any appeal taken. Mass Union Public Housing Tenants v Pierce, 755 F.2d 177 8 (D.C. Cir. 1985), McDonald v Schweiker, 726 F.2d 311 (7th Cir. 1983). Congress resolved the 9 difference of opinion by clearly defining “final judgment” as “a judgment that is final and not 10 appealable.” Pub.L. No. 99-80, § 2, 99 Stat. 185 (Aug. 5, 1985). In enacting the amendments, 11 Congress expressly stated its intent to “ratify the approach taken by the courts” in McDonald and 12 Mass Union. Cervantez v Sullivan, 739 F.Supp. 517, 519 (E.D. Cal. 1990) citing H.R. Rep. No.
13 99-120, 99th Cong., 1st Sess., U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News 1985, at 132.

14 Thus, it is clear that the EAJA establishes a deadline after which an application for fees is 15 time-barred, occurring 30 days after judgment is entered by a district court if the action is not 16 appealed, or 90 days after judgment is entered by a circuit court if the Government does not file for a 17 writ of certiorari. Al Harbi v INS, 284 F.3d 1080, 1084, 1086 (9th Cir. 2002). Yet McDonald also 18 noted that “the 30-day provision in the Act was meant to establish a deadline, not a starting point.”
19 726 F.2d at 314. At least two courts have adopted this rationale after the amendments took effect.
20 Utu Utu Gwaitu Parute Tribe v DOI, 773 F.Supp. 1383 (E.D. Cal. 1991), Cervantez v Sullivan, 739
21 F.Supp. 517 (E.D. Cal. 1990).

22 A recent circuit court decision also sheds light on this issue. In Adams v SEC, 287 F.3d 183, 23 186-89 (D.C. Cir. 2002), the court interpreted § 504 of the EAJA, the parallel attorney’s fees 24 provision applicable in administrative proceedings, to also establish a “deadline” for filing for fees of 25 30 days after an administrative order is no longer appealable. In doing so, the court analogized § 504
26 to § 2412, and found McDonald to be persuasive authority. The court found that having a deadline

1 by which the prevailing party could file a single application for fees would reduce the costs to that 2 party Yet the court acknowledged that

3 Even if EAJA may still allow the filing of two applications by reading EAJA's 30-day 4 period as not a window for filing, but rather merely as a deadline for filing, allowing 5 the applicant to choose when to file does not disadvantage the government "[G]iving 6 the claimant a choice whether to ask for fees after he wins in the district court or after 7 the appeal maximizes his welfare, at some cost perhaps to the courts but none we can 8 think of to the executive branch "

9 Adams, 287 F 3d at 188 (emphasis in original), citing McDonald, 726 F 2d at 314-15

10 The Court finds the above rationale persuasive. There is no disadvantage to allowing a 11 prevailing party to apply for fees along the way, each time it prevails In general, it would appear 12 that allowing for application of fees immediately after a district court issues its judgment would tend 13 to promote judicial efficiency, since any fee award or denial thereof could be addressed immediately 14 and contemporaneously with the merits, if even by way of separate appeal. The Court concludes that 15 the EAJA does not create a fixed window during which all fee applications must be filed, but rather a 16 deadline before which such applications must be filed The choice of whether to file for an award of 17 fees as the case proceeds in the appellate process or to wait until all litigation has ceased should be 18 left to the litigant

19 The Supreme Court's decision in Melkonyan v Sullivan, 501 U S 89 (1991), and related 20 cases do not compel a different result Those cases clearly hold that a prevailing party may choose to 21 wait until the end of the litigation to apply for fees and costs at all levels at which he or she 22 prevailed Id. at 96 Yet nothing in those decisions precludes the prevailing party from filing 23 separately at each level as the litigation proceeds A filing deadline was established, not a filing 24 window

25 2. "Substantially justified"

26 "[A] court shall award to a prevailing party . . . fees and other expenses . . . incurred by that party in any civil action . . . brought by or against the United States in any court having jurisdiction of that action, unless the court finds that the position of the United States was substantially justified "

28 U S C § 2412. Although a prevailing party must allege in its motion that the Government's

1 position was not substantially justified, the Government bears the burden of showing substantial 2 justification Edwards v McMahon, 834 F 2d 796, 802 (9th Cir 1987)

3       The Court considers the issue of substantial justification to be unopposed for several reasons
4 First, the Local Rules of the Western District of Washington set forth clear deadlines for pleadings
5 submitted on motions on the Court's calendar Local Rule CR 7(d)(3), under which the present 6 motion was properly noted, requires that "[a]ny opposition papers shall be filed and served not later 7 than the Monday before the noting date " If more time is required to respond to a motion, the 8 opposing party has the option of filing a "motion for relief from a deadline or limit imposed by an 9 order, federal rule or local rule." Local Rule CR 7(d)(2)(A) Such a motion would be noted on the 10 Court's calendar for consideration seven days after its filing date In the present case, the 11 Government filed a timely response to the motion, but rather than address the merits of the motion or 12 move the Court for a continuance, it chose to argue solely that the motion was untimely The 13 Government then asked that it be given another opportunity to address the merits of the motion 14 should the Court decide that the motion was timely No motion for leave of court was filed, no 15 motion for relief from a deadline was noted on the Court's calendar The Court has no sympathy for 16 such complete disregard for the Local Rules of this district To allow such a tactic to succeed would 17 invite chaos, civil litigants could simply choose not to respond to arguments whenever they were too 18 busy in their law practices to comply with the Local Rules, expecting to get another chance to argue 19 if their primary argument did not succeed This approach would not be countenanced with any other 20 represented litigant before this Court, and it will not be countenanced here

21       Second, the Local Rules provide that "[i]f the motion requires consideration of facts not 22 appearing of record, the movant shall also serve and file copies of all affidavits, declarations, 23 photographic or other evidence presented in support of the motion " Local Rule CR 7(b)(1) 24 Respondents assert that their "opening brief in the Ninth Circuit [in the appeal of this case] is due on 25 or before March 21, 2003, and the time of undersigned counsel must be directed toward writing the 26 brief as well as handling other litigation matters " Opp at 6 Even if demands on counsel's time

1 were a legitimate excuse for not addressing the merits of a motion properly before the Court, 2 Respondents put forth no affidavit or declaration of counsel attesting to what “other litigation 3 matters” are so pressing.

4 Third, it is well-established that failure to argue an issue in one’s brief constitutes waiver of 5 that issue Jones v Wood, 207 F 3d 557, 562 n 2 (9th Cir 2000) (failure to argue an issue in an 6 opening brief constitutes waiver), Bazauye v. INS, 79 F 3d 118, 120 (9th Cir 1996) (issues raised for 7 the first time in reply brief are waived) Further, issues raised in a party’s brief but not specifically 8 argued are likewise deemed abandoned Acosta-Huerta v Estelle, 7 F 3d 139, 144 (9th Cir. 1992) 9 (failure to argue reasons for new trial and severance of charges constituted waiver of those 10 arguments). Here, the Government has failed to put forth any argument on the issue of substantial 11 justification of its positions in the underlying case, those arguments are therefore deemed waived 12 As the Government bears the burden of showing substantial justification, the Court considers the 13 assertion of petitioners to be unopposed, and grants the motion on this issue

14 In any case, a brief review of this Court’s order of January 17, 2003, demonstrates that, taken 15 as a whole, the underlying position of the agency and the Government’s litigation position were not 16 substantially justified First, this Court found that every source of law presented by the parties 17 contradicted the INS’ legal position regarding its interpretation of the relevant statute, including the 18 “structure of the statute, the relevant case law, the legislative history of the precursor statute, [and] 19 international law,” and that Petitioners’ reading was “the only interpretation that would give effect to 20 all sections of the statute ” January 17, 2003 Order at 19 Second, prior to this action Respondents 21 had twice litigated these same statutory issues unsuccessfully Jama v. INS, 2002 WL 507046 (D 22 Minn March 31, 2002) (Tunheim, J); Farah v INS, 2002 WL 31866481 (D Minn Dec 20, 2002)
23 (Frank, J.) Third, where an agency’s position violates its own regulations, the position is not 24 substantially justified Gutierrez v. Barnhart, 274 F 3d 1255, 1258 (9th Cir 2001) This Court has 25 already found that Respondents’ litigation position is inconsistent with its own regulations January 26 17, 2003 Order at 17-18 Finally, Respondents’ decision not to release the identities and locations of

1 the members of petitioners' class was not substantially justified, making class certification necessary 2 in order to "address[] the problem of interstate transportation of individuals subject to final orders of 3 removal and the corresponding difficulty in obtaining counsel." Id. at 24

4           3       Petitioner's "itemized statement"

5           An affidavit submitted in support of a motion for fees and costs under the EAJA must include 6 an "itemized statement from any attorney or expert witness representing or appearing in behalf of the 7 party stating the actual time expended and the rate at which fees and other expenses were computed " 8 28 U S C § 2412(d)(1)(B) The Supreme Court has observed that. "[t]here is no precise rule or 9 formula for making fee determinations under EAJA The District Court may attempt to identify 10 specific hours that should be eliminated The court necessarily has discretion in making this 11 equitable judgment " Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 434-37 (1983)

12           First, for the reasons stated above, the Court finds the itemized statement to be unopposed 13

14           Next, the Court finds the statement submitted by Petitioners does contain the "actual time 15 expended" and the "rate at which the fees were computed." The Court notes that the rate charged by 16 Petitioners' counsel was the statutory rate of $125, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(2)(A), which 17 counsel states is far below normal billable rates charged to private clients The declaration submitted 18 by counsel indicates each attorney's area of work, as well as a statement of actual time expended by 19 each attorney to the tenth of an hour The requirements of the statute having been met, and there 20 being no opposition, the Court hereby GRANTS the motion for attorney's fees in the amount of 21 $119,137.50 The Court finds this amount to be reasonable in light of the complexity of the 22 litigation and the quality and thoroughness of the work performed

23           Next, work done by paralegals and legal assistants can be compensable under the EAJA See 24 Krecioch v. United States, 316 F.3d 684, 687 (7th Cir. 2003). "The Supreme Court, and lower 25 courts, have approved the inclusion of fees for paralegals, law clerks, and law students, in fee awards 26

1 under EAJA or analogous fee-shifting statutes, on the theory that their work contributed to their 2 supervising attorney's work product, was traditionally done and billed by attorneys, and could be 3 done effectively by nonattorneys under supervision for a lower rate, thereby lowering overall 4 litigation costs” Cook v Brown, 68 F 3d 447, 453 (Fed Cir 1995), citing Missouri v. Jenkins, 491, 5 U S 274, 288 n 10 (1989) However, paralegal and assistant work is normally only compensable
6 when the work was that “traditionally done by an attorney.” Hyatt v Barnhart, 315 F 3d 239, 255
7 (4th Cir 2002), Celeste v Sullivan, 988 F.2d 1069, 1070 (11th Cir 1992)

8 The declaration submitted attests to specific tasks performed by Ms Kathy Riley, the lead 9 paralegal who worked on this case, including the collection and organization of materials from other 10 jurisdictions, as well as organization of cases, statutes and regulations and other materials Gellert 11 Decl at 5 These tasks can be said to have been traditionally done and billed by attorneys However, 12 given that the justification for allowing such compensation is the lowering of overall litigation costs, 13 the Court finds that the proposed rate is unreasonable, and lowers the rate to $65 per hour. Therefore 14 the total amount of compensation for Ms. Riley’s time is 145.6 hours x $65/hour = $9464 As to the 15 other paralegals working on this case, not enough information is provided for the Court to determine 16 whether the tasks performed were traditionally those done and billed by attorneys These amounts 17 are therefore DENIED

18 Finally, costs are requested in the amount of $847.96 The Court finds these costs to be 19 reasonable, and therefore GRANTS the request.

20 CONCLUSION

21 In light of the legislative history of the EAJA and the relevant case law, the Court holds that 22 Petitioners’ application for fees is timely. As the merits of the motion were not opposed by 23 Respondents, the Court hereby GRANTS the motion Fees and costs are awarded in the total amount 24 of $129,449.46
